ment made by the Auditor-General was false. He felt persuaded that that gentleman was far above anything of the kind, and that whatever the Auditor-General had written was absolutely true. The honorable Member, Mr. Dickson, he thought, bound under the circumstances to read to the committee what had been written on the subject.

Mr. MORIARTY would never think of accusing the Colonial Secretary or any other gentleman of wilfully misquoting a document or stating that which was untrue. He had no doubt the matter was capable of explanation, and an explanation was necessary before the vote was dealt with. Mr. COWPER explained that the vote was dealt with in this shape at the express desire of the Auditor-General, who pointed out a letter that, owing to the heavy additional work thrown on his department in the shape of voluminous returns ordered by the House, it was impossible to retain the services of experienced and competent clerks, unless an extraordinary increase was allowed in consideration of the heavy extra work. And in an accompanying memorandum, written by Mr. Thomson, it appeared that there was now only one person in the department who had been there in 1850—so frequent had the changes been from the cause stated. As to an Audit Bill, and the audit system of Victoria, he (Mr. COWPER) believed the audit system was far more satisfactory and far less expensive. He was satisfied of this, having had some little opportunity, while in Melbourne, of ascertaining how the audit system worked there.

Mr. MORIARTY, supplementing what had fallen from the Colonial Secretary, pointed out that, in quoting from the Statistical Register, the honorable Member, Mr. Dickson, had quoted the number of years the parties in the shape of public service. The period mentioned did not refer to their service in this particular department only.

Mr. DRIVER objected to the increase, and considered that if the estimate was carried as it stood this ought to be the most perfect and efficient department in any of the colonies.

Mr. LUCAS also announced his intention of voting against all the proposed increases.

The question was put for the proposed reduction, and negatived by 23 to 7.

Mr. DALGLEISH moved that the item of one clerk at £300 be reduced to £275.

This was put, and negatived without division.

Mr. LUCAS moved a reduction of the item one clerk at £300 be reduced to £250.

This was put, and negatived on division by a majority of 21 to 6.

Mr. COWPER, in answer to Mr. LUCAS, said that if £250 for extra clerical assistance were voted, additional clerks would be required to prepare the returns, and the money would not be given as gratuities to the clerks now employed.

Mr. LUCAS moved the omission of the last item of £300 for extra clerical assistance.

This was put, and negatived on division by a majority of 20 to 7.

The amount was then voted.

The following was then moved.

Register-General, £3000

Deputy Register-General, £400

Clerk, £300

Three clerks at £215

Three clerks at £125

Three clerks at £125

Book porter and officekeeper

Messenger

Allowances to District Registrar

Freight and carriage of books and forms

Additional clerical assistance, and unforeseen expenses

Cost of binding

Supplies of stationery

Mr. COWPER, in answer to Mr. Driver, said that the Registrar-General had been largely increased in consequence of the largely increased business of the Act now before the House. It was the intention of the Government to increase the salary of the Registrar-General to £1000 a year, that being the amount paid to Mr. Torrens in South Australia for his services in the same office.

Mr. DRIVER moved that the salary of the Registrar-General be reduced from £800 to £700.

This was put and negatived, on division, by a majority of 24 to 6.

Mr. LUCAS stated that this gentleman, in addition to the travelling expenses of £2 a day, charged also for the use of the steamship. He moved that the vote be reduced by the sum of £300.

Mr. DRIVER said he believed Mr. Rolleston did not charge £2 a day travelling expense, while he was in the steamship.

The amendment was put and negatived.

Mr. DRIVER proposed that there be an increase of £300 in the sum proposed as allowance to District Registrar.

Mr. COWPER said this was not an increase, because these gentlemen were paid by fee.

Mr. FORSTER said the District Registrar of Hyde complained that he was not paid his fee regularly, and that the delay in getting his fee was a great annoyance.

Mr. COWPER said he would cause enquiry to be made into this matter.

The Estimates were put and passed.

Mr. COWPER moved the following:—

Observer, £500

Assistant, £300

Messenger and porter, £100

Meteorological observations, £30

Purchase of books, £30

Incidental expenses, £30

Expense of magnetic survey, £100

In reply to Mr. DALGLEISH, Mr. COWPER said the Government were endeavouring to secure a gentleman from England who would be competent to take the place of Mr. Scott's resignation would take place on the 1st of next month, and until his place was filled up the Observatory would be under the charge of Mr. Scott.

Mr. DALGLEISH wished to ask what was the utility of this office. If any discovery were made in astronomy it generally came from Mr. Tobolski of Windsor. He thought if they got all this data from a gentleman who had nothing to do with the astronomy they should not be called on to vote this salary. Mr. Scott furnished a report in which there was nothing but a list of names of the stars, and he had no necessity for their keeping up this Observatory.

Mr. COWPER supported the value of the institution and the report furnished by Mr. Scott, but best judged of by scientific men.

With regard to Mr. Tobolski, the Government had offered him an appointment, but he had twice refused it. He was first offered the appointment of assistant, and it was intended to him that he might have the appointment of astronomer, but he had refused it.

The Estimate was put and passed.

Mr. W. FORSTER moved the following item:—

Curator of the Museum, £700

Mr. COWPER said he believed Mr. Rolleston did not charge £2 a day travelling expense, while he was in the steamship.

Mr. COWPER said the correspondence relative to this appointment had been laid upon the table. There had been a dispute between the Government and the gentleman who should have the appointment. He explained the steps that had been taken to secure Mr. Fitterer as the man to take the place of Mr. Rolleston. The trustees wished to make the appointment, and he contended that it rested with them. He, on the other hand, finding that the head of the British Museum was appointed by the Crown, and that the Government had nothing to do with the appointment, he contended that it rested with the Government to make it. At present the appointment was not filled up, but he did not think much inconvenience had taken place in consequence, because they had the services of an acting curator.

Mr. W. FORSTER did not see how the House could be called upon to express any opinion in the matter. It must be evident that the trustees were so far wrong that practically they could not exercise any responsibility in the matter, and the Government might claim independently of the Government. He did not see that the House ought to interfere in the matter, and he contended that it was the duty of the Government to take it.

Mr. MORIARTY could not see that the House ought to interfere in so nice a point as appeared to be here involved.

Mr. DALGLEISH said that he did not think the House should interfere in the matter, and he contended that it was the duty of the Government to take it.

Mr. HANCOCK was glad there was to be a change in the transaction of our colonial business in England, and thought Mr. Hamilton a very proper appointment, because he knew what was required by the colony, and could be a gentleman of the colony, as an occasion might require. He could talk to a chimney sweep as well as to a baronet.

Mr. STEWART thought if this appointment were made the expenses would be greater than was proposed. He hoped, however, that this appointment would not lead to the sending home unnecessarily for articles which could be as well produced in the colony as to be sent to a baronet.

Mr. HOSKINS wished to know whether the gentleman, if appointed, would be the agent between the Government and persons who might supply goods to the Colonial Government.

Mr. COWPER Yes.

Mr. HOSKINS: The colonial agent would be responsible for every transaction.

Mr. COWPER: So far as an agent could be responsible.

Mr. HOSKINS said that in such a case he did not think the money would be wasted.

Mr. DALGLEISH said he thought the colonial agent had done justice to the colony at the Exhibition—that the wine and coal, and some other things sent from New South Wales, had not been properly exhibited.

Mr. COWPER: I thought this a most absurd charge, for if there was any colony to which credit had been done it was New South Wales.

Mr. WILSON asked whether it was a fact that the only coal for which a model had been given was that of a company in which Mr. Hamilton was interested?

Mr. COWPER said he did not know, but, if such were the case, he could not believe it had been brought about by the influence of Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. DALGLEISH thought sufficient had not been added to show the necessity for such an appointment.

The estimate was passed by 26 to 5—the minority being, Mr. Driver, Mr. W. Forster, and Mr. Dalgleish.

years ago. Its price varies in London from £34 to £40 per pipe in bond, but the wine growers have great hopes of improving its quality by the aid of the knowledge of the Madeira growers, and by propagating the same kind of grape, as quite the best for the wine to the standard of the products of that island. In order to effect this, many of the Madeira labourers with their implements, &c., and accompanied by their families, have, in the last few years, a great number of them, emigrated to the estates of the Pervian family, the first exporter of the wines in question. The wine crops of Peru are considerable, but they may become infinitely more important, as the soil is admirably adapted to the culture of the grape, more especially in the provinces of Yca and Maricao. The wine of this island is indeed so fruitful that, at one of the Elías 'sneyads, called 'Hoyas,' the grapes are produced subject of the somewhat delicate relations between the two countries, and the manner in which the English tongue was enjoying what is called the hospitality of England—that is, being allowed, with scarcely any notice at all, to go about and spend as much money as it pleased in the hands of the nobles and the suburban villa, who he hired for himself

 as to—or sleep on board his yacht,
 which absolutely was allowed the privilege of being allowed to be considered as a part of England. It is believed that if Lord Palmerston had mentioned to Mr. Griffith the real communication which was made to him by the Pacha it would have been a great deal more satisfactory. The ques-

 a tradition of the place in which it meets, as well as of the manner in which it is conducted. It is the smaller and less intrinsically valuable the better

CHINESE SUICIDE.—A touching instance of this occurred at Canton some years ago, in the case of a young accomplished girl, who had been unfortunately married to a brutal husband. When on a visit to her parents, she complained to a small party of her unmarried sisters and cousins of the misery she endured, and declared her intention of drowning herself. "Oh!" said these young ladies, "if that is married life, we shall down ourselves too." So they all joined hands together, and, walking into a fishpond, became brides of death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

PAINTING.—"She isn't all that fancy painted her!" bitterly exclaimed a rejected lover; "and, worse than that, she isn't all that she paints herself."

THE UNITED STATES AND EUROPE.
The Paris correspondent of the Times writes:

Events subsequent to the late Majesty's Government have shown the error of their opinion upon the first of these points were not mistaken. Victories have been gained, reverses have followed; positions have been reached in the near neighbourhood of the capital of the Confederates, and these positions have been again abandoned. These events have been accompanied by great loss of life in battle and in hospital, while such measures as the Confiscation Bill passed through both Houses of Congress, and the proclamations of General Butler at New Orleans bear evidence of the increasing bitterness of the strife, The
